MURDER TRIAL.-When the GAZETTE'S report of the trial of the three Kidwell boys and Alfred Barrett, charged with the mur-der of George Wertenbaker, closed yesterder of George Wertenbaker, closed yester-day evening, A. D. Sullivan was on the stand for the presecution. He was follow-ed by W. Duncan, A. J. Cheshire, J. Dun-can and Shadrach Jackson, whose testimony brought to light nothing new in the case. Court then adjourned till this morning when the jury was put in charge of the sergeant, again spending the night in the court room again spending the night in the court room, after taking supper and a walk.

Court met shortly after 9 o'clock this morning, when A. F. Fisher was put upon the stand by the prosecution, and after giv-ing his testimony the witnesses for the defence were examined. They were Thomas Hayes, R. Mason, — Torrison, C. Howell, Douglas Kidwell (one of the prisoners), Jas. Blackburn (colored), and W. E. Grady. Douglas Kidwell testified that he was on his way from his home in Prince George's county, Md., to the brick works at Waterloo, and got on the train at the depot; the conductor passed through the car, taking up the tickets, when he handed him his; the conductor took his ticket and passed on but soon returned with another man when the two grabbed him, threw him off and beat him severely. This was all he recollected of the beginning of the disturbance as he was drunk at the time. He said that he was the man who was put off the train and not Alfred Barrett as had been alleged by most of the witnesses; said he was struck on the head with a piece of iron or something of that kind and was kicked in two places about the head; that two men had hold of him in ejecting him from the car and that in doing so they tore his coat. On crossexamination he said he did not throw any stones nor did he see any one else throw any; he was very drunk at the time.

All the evidence being in, Mr. Leonard
Marbury, the Commonwealth's Attorney, made the opening argument before the jury He presented the case clearly and logically, contending that all the evidence went to show that Douglas Kidwell, after the affray was over, with malice in his heart, threw the stone that killed Wertenbaker, the brakeman, and that the jury ought to find him, and the other defendants, guilty as in-dicted. Mr. Marbury, who occupied about an hour in the presentation of the Common-wealth's side of the case, was followed by

Mr. John H. Greene, of counsel for the prisoners, who said that if the defendants were guilty of murder, with malice in their hearts, he asked no consideration for them; but he did not believe they were, and thought the representatives of the railroad company, who commenced the affray by putting the men off the train without justi fication, were the parties to be held respon-sible. He contended that this was not a case of the people against violators of the law, but a case of a rich corporation against the poor, using the Commonwealth as a tool to assist it in escaping damages for the death of one of its employees. He declared that the introduction of a stenographer in the court to take the testimony, at $50 a day, was a most unusual occurrence, and from that fact he argued that the power behind the throne in this case was the railroad

Mr. Brent closed for the defence. He argued that there was no evidence to estabish the fact that Wertenbaker had been killed by the blow in the stomach with a tone, but that death had rather resulted from a blow he had received on the head during the row; he held that the stone which struck Wertenbaker was not thrown at him, but at some one else, and was thrown in self defence to protect the man who was being assaulted; that the men were unlawfully ejected from the train and that it was the train men's fault that the row occurred. In defence of the other four men, he read authorities to show that the mere presence of the men was not evidence to prove that they were aiders or abettors in the difficulty. He closed his argument at 1 o'clock, at which time Court took a recess till 3, and the jurors were put in charge of a Court met again at 3 o'clock when Mr. Marbury began his finishing argument for the Common wealth. He spoke for an hour, after which the instructions to the jury as agreed upon by coun-sel were submitted, without argument, and the case given to the jury. The Judge announced that he would be in readiness to receive the verdict at any time up to 9 o'clock to-night wherepon Court took a recess.

EXCITEMENT.—Considerable excitement was created, and a large crowd attracted, at the Prince street wharf this morning, when the steamer Mary Washington stopped on her way to River View, by a difficulty which occurred on the steamer. It appears that a young man of this city, named Mont DeVaughan, who was under For Policemen the nominees were the present force: Wm. C. Brenner, Joshua Sherwood, Jeremiah Franks, John Lawler, by Capt. Randall, whereupon he became violent, and assailed the Captain, striking him a blow in the face. DeVaughan then left the wharf, and upon the arrival on the scene soon after the occurrence of officers Davis and Hayes, he ran off, closely pursued by the officers, and after a close chase, which excited much amusement, De Vaughan finally eluded his pursuers and made his escape in one of the back yards on the square bounded by Prince, Duke, Union and Lee streets. A warrant was afterwards issued

MR. MOORE FOR THE SENATE.—As stated in yesterday's Gazette, Mr. R. W. Moore was unanimously endorsed for the State Senate from the district composed of the counties of Alexandria, Fairfax and Prince William, at the democratic meeting held at Fairfax C. H., on Monday last. The follow-ing resolution, offered by Mr. J. M. Love, was adopted:

Whereas it is generally understood that our present able and efficient State Senator. Hon. E. E. Meredith, will decline a re-election, and as Fairfax, in such event, would be entitled to the nomination, this meeting hereby expresses its preference for our countyman, Mr. R. W. Moore, for the position, and should be allow the use of his name in that connection, we pledge him our cordial and heartly support.

Mr. Moore, has peretofore, on several

Mr. Moore has heretofore, on several occasions, declined to be a candidate for the Legislature, though urged by representative democrats. His friends hope that he will yield to their wishes on this occasion, and allow the use of his name now, being assured that he will make a worthy representative.

A LOCAL OPTION QUESTION .- Since the local option law went into effect in several counties of the State many opersons in such counties have procured their usual allowance of liquor by buying the quantities they wanted in the cities nearest them and hav-ing it shipped to their homes "c. o. d." by the Adams Express Company. This was an easy way of getting liquor, and the express company for some time has been doing quite a lively business in carrying kegs, demijohns, jugs, etc., charging for the trans-portation of the same and also for collecting for the seller the price of the liquor. It is understood that persons living in local op-tion counties who are interested in the observance of the law, intend taking legal steps to prevent the evasion of the same and have threatened the express company with prosecution on the ground that by collecting the price of the liquor it becomes a party to its sale. The express company may probably be compelled to cease acting as a collecting agent for the sale of liquor, but it will not be prevented from carrying all that is offered for shipment.

The excussion of the Old Dominion Boat Club is expected to be the finest they have ever given. A splendid brass and string band has been engaged, which will play all the way down and back and at the hall. It is hoped that enough tickets may be sold to go far towards buying a shell.
